v.	)	MEMORANDUM OPINION

HAROLD CLARK,	)	By: Hon. Glen E. Conrad

Jacob D. Peyton, a Virginia inmate proceeding pro se, has submitted a pleading entitled "RULE 60 MOTION," asking this court to vacate a recent ruling by the Supreme Court of Virginia. Because Peyton's allegations as a whole sought to void the unidentified state court criminal judgment under which he is currently incarcerated, the court docketed his pleading as a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Upon review of the records, however, the court concludes that his petition, by whatever name, must be summarily dismissed for failure to state any ground for relief.<sup>1</sup>

Peyton asserts that during state criminal proceedings in the Augusta County Circuit Court, the Commonwealth offered Peyton a plea bargain for a sentence of seven years and eight months in prison which counsel did not properly explain or review with Peyton in writing. After Peyton's conviction and direct appeals, he filed a state habeas corpus petition in 2011, alleging that counsel provided ineffective assistance with regard to the plea bargain offer. The Circuit Court denied the petition without review of the merits, and Peyton's habeas appeal in the Supreme Court of Virginia and his federal habeas corpus petition were also unsuccessful.

<sup>1</sup> Under Rule 4(b) of the Rules Governing § 2254 Cases, the court may summarily dismiss a § 2254 petition "[i]f it plainly appears from the petition and any attached exhibits that the petitioner is not entitled to relief in the district court."

Peyton then filed a “([Va. Code Ann.] 8.01-428) Motion to Vacate – Set Aside Void Judgment,” CL30001467-00, in the Circuit Court, raising this same ineffective assistance claim. The Circuit Court dismissed his petition, and the Supreme Court of Virginia refused his subsequent appeal, Record No. 131320. Now, Peyton relies on Rule 60 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as authority for an order from this court vacating the Supreme Court of Virginia’s order refusing his appeal.

Lower federal courts, like this one, do not have jurisdiction to conduct appellate review of any state court’s judgment. Plyler v. Moore, 129 F.3d 728, 731 (4th Cir. 1997). Jurisdiction for appellate review of state court judgments lies exclusively with superior state courts and, ultimately, with the United States Supreme Court. Id.; 28 U.S.C. §1257. But see id. at 732 (recognizing lower federal courts’ jurisdiction to review final judgments of state courts in federal habeas corpus proceedings under § 2254).<sup>2</sup> Therefore, to the extent that Peyton seeks to pursue an appeal in this court from a ruling by the Supreme Court of Virginia, he states no ground for relief.

Peyton also has no ground for direct relief from a state court judgment under Rule 60(b). The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, by their own terms, only “govern the procedure in all civil actions and proceedings in the United States district courts. . . .” Fed. R. Civ. P. 1. Therefore, <sup>2</sup> To the extent that Peyton intends to seek release from incarceration under the 2008 judgment of the Augusta County Circuit Court convicting him of breaking and entering and grand larceny, his present petition would be properly construed and summarily dismissed as a successive § 2254 petition. However, court records indicate that Peyton has already pursued § 2254 relief regarding this judgment. See Peyton v. Clark, Case No. 7:12CV00574 (W.D. Va. 2013), appeal dismissed, No. 13-7658 (4th Cir. 2014). Thus, Peyton’s current petition is a subsequent one, falling under the prohibition in 28 U.S.C. § 2244(b) against a second or successive petition.

Pursuant to § 2244(b), a federal district court may consider a second or successive § 2254 petition only if petitioner secures specific certification from the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit that the claims in the petition meet certain criteria. § 2244(b)(3). Peyton does not demonstrate that he has obtained such certification by the Court of Appeals.

these rules cannot provide a vehicle by which a litigant may seek relief from any state court ruling whatsoever, criminal or civil.

Because Peyton's allegations in this petition do not state any ground on which he is entitled to relief in this court, his petition must be summarily dismissed. An appropriate order will enter this day.

The Clerk is directed to send copies of this memorandum opinion and accompanying order to petitioner.

ENTER: This 14th day of May, 2014.
